Carson Poore

Creative marketing student · College alternative · Built to move fast and think differently
Greater Indianapolis

Summary

I'm a marketing student - just not the traditional kind. I chose a college alternative route through Vertical Immersive, a hands-on, project-based higher education model in Indianapolis. Not because I couldn't do the conventional path. Because I looked where I wanted to go and decided that the fastest way to get there was to actually start going. I think differently by design. I'm drawn to bold ideas, contrarian strategy, and the kind of creative thinking that makes people question why no one tried it sooner. I don't move slow. I don't wait for permission. And I don't believe in safe marketing - because safe marketing doesn't change anything. My Clifton Strengths tell part of the story: Strategic. Futuristic. Ideation. Connectedness. Empathy. That combination means I see where things are going before most people see where they are, connect dots that don't seem related, and actually bring people with me - because I genuinely care about them. My faith shapes how I lead. I'm a Christian who believes that real influence is built on integrity, that people matter more than metrics, and that the best leaders make the people around them better. That's the kind of marketer - and person - I'm building myself to be. What I'm chasing isn't just a career in marketing. It's a seat at the table where bold decisions get made. Where creative strategy shapes culture. Where the work actually means something. I'm still early. But I'm moving fast - and I'm just getting started.
